Fire Destroys Photo-On-China Factory

An early morning fire, Thursday, Jan. 28 destroyed the building and equipment of Shearer B. Robertson, Photo-on-China-ware shop and photographer on South Church Street. The fire also destroyed the building owned and occupied by Dr. G. P. Geisler, optometrist and an apartment building adjoining it owned by A. E. Hopkinson and occupied by Mrs. Elijah McFadden.

Chief Carl Wooldridge of the Appomattox Volunteer Fire Department said the fire was discovered at 3 a.m. and was brought under control shortly after dawn through the combined efforts of the Appomattox and Concord Volunteer Fire and Concord Volunteer Fire Departments.

The fire was believed to have originated in the rear of the building.

Firemen and others saved some furniture in the McFadden apartment and some medical equipment and records of Dr. Geisler, but nothing was saved from the Photo-on-Chinaware Shop owned for 30 years by the Robertsons.

Early this week Mr. and Mrs. Robertson announced that they have resumed partial operations in the old J. T. Almond store adjacent to their former location on South Church Street.

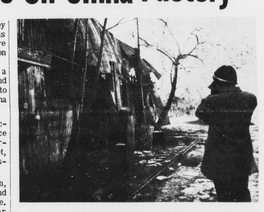
Workmen are constructing a darkroom in the building and equipment has been ordered to resume the processing of china plates with photos.

Dr. Geisler also has announced that he will have his office on the second floor of the Harwood building on Main Street, former location of the Times-Virginian.

Mrs. McFadden and her son, Ellis (Buster) lost clothing and personal belongings in the fire, included in the loss was a guitar amplifier and tape equipment.

Patrick Lair, owner and operator of Lair's Car Wash in the same block as the fire, lost some of his equipment because of a power outage. Extremely cold weather caused his equipment to freeze before power was restored to the area.

For the Robertsons it was an almost total loss of business records, negatives essential to their photo - on - chinaware operation, cameras, spraying and drying installations.



TV cameraman Kleber Gregory of Bedford, lines up a photo of the Shearer Robertson Photo-on-China Shop on South Church Street, scene of an early morning fire Thursday, Jan. 28 which totally destroyed cameras, negatives, business records and processing equipment for the company which ships thousands of picture plates each year all over the United States. Robertson is also a well known photographer. The picture plate business is based on a technique developed by his brother, the late David W. Robertson for transferring a photograph to a china plate. Lost also in the fire were artists materials to tint the plates. The firm employs several part-time artists for this, and Mr. and Mrs. Robertson's son-in-law, Mickey Martin, like Robertson, is an accomplished photographer and technician.

Dr. W. P. Geisler (right) talks with W. W. Blythe, president of the Appomattox County Chamber of Commerce, about damage done to his office (closest to camera) and the adjacent building owned by A. E. Hopkinson. The Shearer Robertson Photo-on-china-ware shop at the rear was completely destroyed in an early morning fire Thurs., Jan. 28. All three structures were termed a total loss.
